Some Memories of St. Patrick's Day in Hawley-Correcting a Bit 4 of Local History-Camp Fire Girls of America Have Fine Time -A Budget of Personals, Etc.

Oh, merrily rang the music, As folks marched up and down, In the good old way On Patrick's day, In joyous Hawley town.

ONDAY was St. Patrick's day in "sweet Hawley under the hills" just the same as it of Father Burke was in Honesdale and everywhere else in the wide, wide world. Nearly everybody you met wore a sprig of green, and those who were not "a-wearin' of the wore a lonesome look just as green" wore a lonesome look just as if they had missed or forgotten some-

The main event in town was the evening entertainment held in Odd Fellows' hall by members of St. Philomena's choir and the Cadets of tem-The entertainment was of a social, musical and oratorical char-All of the selections were lines pertinent to the day and decidedly appropriate. The poetical, romantic, historical, legendary and musical sides of the land where grows the shamrock all had their proper place on the programme, and the audience was well pleased with what they saw and heard.

Time was when March 17 was the annual occasion for a street parade. We never saw but one or two, yet we heard about them in our boyhood days. We don't like to refer to such things, but in those days there was not the understanding between nationalities and religious denominations that happily exists to-day. That was in the days when there were two prominent classes in both Honesdale and Hawley, one known as "railroaders" and the other as "canalers." There never was any love between these classes, and it didn't take much of a remark, or a very large "chip on the shoulder" to provoke a fight. Indeed, an innocent little remark like this: "St. Patrick is just as good a man as Fourth of July ever was," has been known to "start things." Everybody knows that it is easier to "start things" than it is to stop them after they are started. Happy are we that "Now we know each other better Since the mists have rolled away."

The last St. Patrick's day parade that Hawley had was held several years ago, and it is of such a memorable character that a word or two about it will not be out of place here and now. Hawley arranged for a grand parade, and societies from Honesdale and Port Jervis were to take part in the demonstration. Then the unusual occurred in the nature of a whopping big snow storm. E. V. Murray, who died three or four years ago, was then in his prime, and hitching four strong horses to a snow plow he proceeded to break roads through the streets. Frank Curran says he rode on the plow and that the snow was nearly two feet deep. Furthermore the ride was a cold one. The parade took place all right, and the people had a good time; but the custom of parading is giving way to celebrations along literary and musical lines, and it is much pleas-anter to sing and orate about the "dear little shamrock" in a well heated and well lighted hall, than it to hunt after the beautiful little bit of natural green beneath the

The Firemen Getting Ready.

The annual ball of the Hawley Fire Department that will be held on Easter Monday night promises to be well attended. The boys are doing everything in their power to make it pleasant for those who at-tend. Cards and card tables will be provided for those who do not "trip the light fantastic toe."

Hawley's First Post Office.

The writer was told while making his Tuesday trip about town that the first post-office that Hawley had was located at the corner of what is now known as River street and Wangum That must have been when the first trains on the gravity railroad came clattering into town and when the canal was a new proposi-If anybody has an older postoffice than that, just speak right out about it, and we'll see that the statement has proper place in these col-

The Writer Admits Error.

Now we know! Now we realize how that cherry tree story; how that "I cannot tell a lie, father," statement; how that "in the name of the great Jehovah and the Continental Congress" saying, may not have been accurately reported and transcribed. The writer thought he knew all about stone chimney of the Ames hers in Hawley. He remembers Brothers in Hawley. He remembers last statement were $1686.96, while when it was built, although he did not witness the building of it to any great extent. He does remember, however, of riding on the gravity coal cars from Hoadleys to Hawley.

That stone thinks the does its interest that its individual deposits are $511,-594.89. As the writer understands it, the fact of the first National Bank's having a surplus equal to its capital places it in line to be known in harling circles as an Honor Bank. of seeing John Ames at work away up in the air along side another man; and, knowing the reputation of the Ameses for doing things, he believed that Mr. Ames was about all there was to it. Now, it transpires that the "other man" was the real thing, after all. M. J. Hanlan, Honesdale's attorney, says that the who conduct the destiny of Hawley's Wisst National Bank? Here is a list chimney was built from foundation First National Bank? Here is a list stones to the very cap-stones by his step-father, Francis H. Dillon, and that the fine chimney of grey Wayne county stone has been known ever since as "Dillon's Monument." And now, in fairness, we lowing additional directors: H. J. ment." And now, in fairness, we lowing additional directors: H. J. must admit that we could and did Atkinson, E. L. Schlager, John S. make a mistake; and once more we Welsh, P. H. Kearney and R. F. we are reminded of the saying of a wise and witty old aunt of ours, who put it in this way: "Never boast that you have found a duck's nest just because you see a few feathers on a rock."

Camp-Fire Girls Have Fine Time.

Hawley has two camps of the Camp-Fire Girls of America, an organization for girls in their teens ganization for girls in their teets that is conducted along practical lines that are parallel with the Boy Scout movement. One camp is called Wangum and the other Paupack.
Mrs. Helen M. Cooke, wife of the well-known dentist. Is Guardian of all Hawley Camp Fires. She has prepared an article for the April number of The Wayne Countean that will tell all about the movement, and it will be worth reading.

On Monday night the Wangum Camp Fire Girls had a regular council fire. The Doctor's garage was transformed into a miniature camp for the evening. They entertained the Paupack Camp Fire Girls, and had their first initiation, Miss Irene Nell being the candidate. Honor beads were granted for school work for the first time, and the girls wore their ceremonial dresses for the first Wangum camp numbers nine and Paupack camp numbers eight.
Mrs. Cooke arranged ten games, and every girl had a prize. The prizes were along the lines of Indian lore NEWFO and St. Patrick's memory. Beads miniature canoes, shamrocks, etc. Beads, were the souvenir prizes.

The garage was trimmed with trees, and under the trees were miniature camp-fires. There was a large council fire in the grate at the end of the logs. The floor was covered with rugs, and there were no chairs in the room. The girls sat on the Mrs. I

The movement is new and novel and is calculated to do much good. The young girls of Hawley are fortunate in having this delightful opportunity of developing along useful and highly moral lines. The Citizen is delighted to do everything in its power to aid Hawley girls, and all other girls, in this new and eminent-ly practical line of education.

An exceptionally sad dealer that of Miss Jeanette McConnell, who died the first of the week with pneumonia. Miss McConnell was attending school here, boarding at the home of her uncle, David Huff. She had a host of young friends who deeply mourn her loss. Miss McConnell was 16 years of age and was a favorite of the school children. The self funeral was held Tuesday morning for week.

The First National is A "Worth While" Bank.

The First National Bank of Hawley is an institution that Hawley people are justly proud of. It is now in its eleventh year, and its growth in its eleventh year, and its growth has been constant and along sound financial lines. It is capitalized at $50,000, and it has a surplus of $50,000. Its undivided profits at the last statement were $1686.96, while its individual deposits are $511,594.89. As the writer understands it, the fact of the first National Bank's having a surplus equal to its capital places it in line to be known in banking circles as an Honor Bank.
